Worldpay Completes Acquisition of SecureNet Payment Systems

Accelerates strategic shift to multi-channel payments integrator enabling businesses to accept payments any way customers want to pay

London, Atlanta and Austin, December 22, 2014 — Worldpay, a leading global provider of payments technology and services to merchants, partners and developers, announced today it has officially closed its acquisition of SecureNet Payment Systems from private equity firm Sterling Partners.

SecureNet, based in Austin, TX, pioneered the payment industry's only cloud-based solution to seamlessly integrate point-of-sale, mobile and eCommerce payments processing, inventory management and data analytics for merchants.

Worldpay says the acquisition will dramatically accelerate its strategic shift from a more traditional processor to a multichannel payments integrator that enables businesses to accept payments any way their customers want to pay. According to Worldpay US President and CEO Tony Catalfano, the move away from traditional transaction processing to enabling consumer-driven purchasing experiences across channels is the future of commerce.

"As the leaders in modern money, Worldpay is bridging payments acceptance with consumer buying preferences to produce actionable data business owners can use to drive more sales in their stores," said Catalfano. "And acquiring SecureNet's market-leading payments technology platform will allow Worldpay customers to always make the sale, regardless of how their customers want to pay."

With the acquisition, Worldpay also gains SecureNet's extensive network of more than 100 referral and integrated partners, and relationships with more than 17,000 merchants. SecureNet has several patents pending for its technology and a strong track record of rapid innovation delivery.

"Simplify and streamline the payments experience will remain our commitment as we become part of Worldpay," said SecureNet Payment Systems CEO Brent Warrington. "Today's global consumers are savvy and demand an ever evolving retail experience. As Worldpay, we can deliver more value to more customers through more distribution channels that can fuel future growth and continued innovation for merchants, partners and developers."

Brent Warrington and the SecureNet team will remain with Worldpay, which will maintain its commitment to the growing Austin, TX technology community.
